SUNFALL: A Post-Apocalyptic Survival Fiction Series: Book 2: ADVENT

Synopsis

Ripley and her friends have escaped the University's lockdown and started their journey home on foot. They've found an opportunity to get supplies they sorely need, but the risk is high. Marco insists that the world is already far more dangerous than it seems, while Ripley's not yet convinced. She's about to get a very bloody wake-up call. Back home, Dotty worries over her little makeshift family, scattered to the four winds. Her neighbor is already out of food and getting pushy. There's been a riot, and a man was killed. Holiday travelers, stranded without gas, fill the town's parking lots. The elderly have begun dying. At the edge of town, watching over the Federal prison, the Sheriff faces a horrible decision. The idyllic little town of Snow Hill is a powder keg, and the Mayor is holding a match. Over the past century, people had become so reliant on electricity that they forgot how to provide for themselves. With the push of a button, food cooked in minutes. Endless clean water flowed from the faucets. Freezers preserved food for years. Stores were open twenty-four hours a day; there was no need to keep a pantry. What once had been thought of as magic had become normal. Ripley and Dotty are about to discover that normal has left the building. Reality, with all of its hardships and danger, has arrived. Not everyone will survive it.

Customer Reviews

Book one in this series had enough interest to lead me to book 2. In every way that matters to me, book 2 is even better than the first one. The characters have further development. Rip, the young female protagonist, really grows-grows through getting bashed around until she truly understands that the world has changed and she must change with it. As in the first book, the POV of the female character is refreshing and unique in a post apocalyptic thriller. I also enjoy author Gideon's imagination. She sets up situations that I would not have thought of. The world has become much grimmer for our characters. We hope that pluck and determination will carry them through. Our now pal, author Gideon, has set up the story for a continuation. What will the chicken farmer do? Will the handsome young student capture the heart of Rip or will she reject him? And where will the gigantic biker felon fit in? Please keep writing, Mz. Gideon.

Drew Gideon has hit the ball out of the park with the beginning of this series. I can only hope the adventures of Corey, Mel, Marco and Riley continue as they settle into their home town.. Josh deserves to show up as well. The Preacher and his friends will be a great counterpoint to the regular cast of characters!

WOW, what a ride the tension is palpable the dangers seem real, the characters are detailed and believable, if you liked Book 1 you'll Love the 2nd Book.

A very good storyline. The story is very well developed, and all of the characters are strong. The main character is young, idealistic, and naïve, and it showed until she had to harden up or die. Hope there's at least one more book to round things out for all the characters. And, D. Gideon, PLEASE, don't kill off either of the two characters mentioned in your author's notes at the end!!!! That would absolutely ruin this story.

This book deserves a five star rating because of the excellent character and plot development! This is the kind of layered storytelling I look for because the author provides a characters' back story and it helps the reader understand the nuances of each one. I read a lot of "prepper porn" and this is the first author who did the right thing with the violent inmates. I appreciate that, and the careful deliberations the characters engaged in before deciding on the course of action. So thank you for a really gripping story!

The author does an excellent job in creating personalities that you will love or hate. He convincingly weaves in the decision points and events that cause dramatic changes to the characters' understanding of what they must do to survive. You will experience the run of emotions. I spent 32 years in the Army and believe I have a good grasp on the potential results following significant catastrophes. This is among the better of survival series and definitely was very hard to put down between my honey-dos. Well done.

Four college friends are trying to get home after a natural disaster has caused the electricity to go out all over the world. Two have been raised to understand what to expect and how to take care of themselves in a situation like this. One is a young man who was raised in war torn areas and can handle himself in dangerous situations. And one is a young woman raised in the American political arena. Together they journey through the dangers of lawlessness and the breakdown of our society where frightened people do the unthinkable and mobs become a force uncontrolled. This story also tells of the hometown these young people are trying to get to and the hard decisions that must be made to maintain safety for all. How are the governments and politicians working, or not working to create safety for all? The story leaves you much to think about. And left me with desire to be prepared and self reliant.

So when does the next book in the series come out?!? Enjoyed following how the characters made it home. Bravo!
