Anne Belgrave lives on the Welsh borders. After an initial training as a sculptor, she worked as a silversmith, and later as a weaver. As a result of keeping sheep and using their wool, she learnt about felt and was immediately intrigued by its potential. She now makes felt hats and rugs for sale and exhibitions. She also gives lectures and runs workshops to inspire people to revive the ancient art of felting.

Nice book, with some good ideas. Early in this round of felt revolution, so the techniques of today, like nuno felt is not covered, but a nice book, with cute, easy to make ideas.

This book could use a little more variety and instructions. Very vague. Not many useable projects. Would not recommend this particular read.

This book has so many awesome projects including how to make felt hats and bags. It's a wealth of information.

As a Textile Technology teacher I was looking for a resource that would be relevant, and contain simple directions with clear pictures and a variety of projects to choose from. This book has all those features and will definitely come in handy as both a student and teacher resource.
